
Your Privacy at Our Practice

Effective Date: August 1, 2026

A plain-language summary for patients and families

Protecting your information is an important part of providing thoughtful dental care. This page summarizes our privacy practices. The full Notice of Privacy Practices controls if there is any difference.

How we use your information

- We use health information to provide and coordinate dental treatment, run the practice, and bill for services.
- We may share relevant records with another dentist, dental specialist, physician, pharmacy, laboratory, imaging provider, or other healthcare practitioner involved in your care.
- At your written request, we can send copies of your records to another provider or person you designate, as permitted by law.

Your rights

- You may request access to your records and ask for corrections.
- You may request confidential communications and certain restrictions.
- You may request an accounting of certain disclosures and a paper copy of the full notice.
- You may appoint a legally authorized representative and may complain without retaliation.

How we protect information

- We limit access to people who need information to perform their duties.
- We use administrative, physical, and technical safeguards appropriate to the practice.
- We require appropriate safeguards from service providers when the law requires them.
- We provide breach notifications when required by law.
